STYLE NAME DEFINITIONS

- Ace

(also called a “hole-in-one”)

a score of one on a hole — holing the first shot.

- Albatross

(also called a “double eagle”)

a score of three under par for a hole.

- Ambrose

a tournament format in which all players in a group hit a shot from the tee, and each subsequent location, always playing from the position of the best or preferred ball until the ball is holed.

- Birdie

a score of one under par for a hole.

- Blade

1. (also “leading edge”) the leading (lowest/forward-most) edge of a club’s head, where the sole and face meet.
2. (also “skull, thin, belly”) when the ball is contacted with the leading edge instead of the face of the club, producing a low trajectory shot with less than the usual amount of spin.
3. a style of iron head that is (usually) smaller and thinner along the bottom but especially along the top edge, resembling a blade.

- Brassie

archaic term for a two wood.

- Condor

(also “triple eagle”)

a score four under par on a hole.

- Double Cross

when a player attempts to make a shot curve, or bend, in one direction and it curves in the opposite direction.

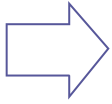

- Fade

a gently curving shot from left to right for a right-handed player and from right to left for a left-handed player.

- Fensome

(also “St. Andrews Foursome”)

an alternate shot tournament format with two two-man teams in each foursome, each player hits a tee shot, then the best tee shot of each two-man team is selected and the other ball is picked up, the second shot is played by the team members in pre-determined order.

- Gator

(also “claw grip, psycho grip”)

an unusual method of gripping the putter, popularized by PGA Tour player Chris Dimarco, where the fingers of the bottom hand are on top of the grips rather than on the bottom.

- Grind

1. maintaining or intensifying one’s mental focus, similar to the expressions “bear down” or “stay focused,” generally meaning to concentrate on every shot and not get distracted.

2. “custom grind” generic label referring to some proprietary iron head or sole shape, usually on forged irons – could also refer to the fact that some players alter their own club swing weight, flange shape, etc. using a grinding wheel.

- Hybrid Club

(also “hybrid iron, hybrid wood”)

a club that combines playing characteristics of both woods and irons; one valid method for differentiating between hybrid irons and hybrid woods is whether the face is flat (like irons) or has horizontal bulge and vertical roll (curved face, like woods).

- Lay Up

(also “lay back, play for position,” sometimes “transport shot”)

a shot played to a particular location to allow for an easier subsequent shot or to keep the ball from going too far.

- Loft

1. the angle/slope/pitch/grade of the clubface relative to the shaft of the club from the frontal plane.

2. Hoist or lift.

- Looper

a caddy.

- Marshall

1. person designated by a tournament committee to help with crowd control and to keep order.

2. a person designated to patrol the course, keeping an eye out for problems in general, but usually present to promote a reasonable pace of play or keep things moving.

- Sandbagger

(euphemism for “liar, cheater”)

a golfer who lies about their ability in order to gain an advantage in a match or wager, or posts (submits/enters/turns-in) artificially high scores in order to inflate their handicap.

- Trolley

term mainly used in Europe for wheeled golf carts, either for pulling by hand, motorized or to ride in.
